WORKERS'-VOICE-BREAKFAST

Dear Madam / Sir,

The Hans Böckler Foundation kindly invites you to its 8th Workers'-Voice-Breakfast. Due to the current Covid-19 situation the breakfast will be held online. Covid-19 also amplified technical developments and pressure on the speed of the digital transformation has further accelerated. The way we work is changing, too. This is common knowledge. However, how we shape the process is controversial and differs among companies.

"Future of Work – Barcelona 2.0" is an European agreement between the management of Unilever and the Works Council. It's an important example of how workers' voice can have an impact as the European Works Council initiated the process. It wants to shape the future of work by pointing out the necessary steps of change. Sustainable HR and long-term oriented decisions shall ensure the employability of workers. The agreement is supported by a budget which is needed to qualify and train employees.

We would like to discuss the European agreement with Hermann Soggeberg, chair of the European Works Council of Unilever, and Nils Werner, consultant at the Institute for Codetermination and Corporate Governance. What is needed to ensure that companies and employees can adapt to the changing way we work? How does a cooperative manner of interaction between management, works council and trade unions supports the transformation? What has been implemented so far at Unilever?

Please join us for this digi-debate. We are looking forward to meeting you and having a lively dialogue around the impulse statements.

Kind regards,

Maxi Leuchters
