

SOCIAL EUROPE REMAINS THE OBJECTIVE - MORE DEMOCRACY AT WORK PAVES THE WAY OUT OF THE DARK WOODS OF THE CORONA PANDEMIC

- Social and ecological sustainable Europe as a main goal remains relevant after Corona. The crisis has revealed that change is possible as long as society and workers are involved.
- Digitalisation and decarbonisation are further challenges entailing major changes in future.
- The Corona crisis revealed the vulnerability of certain workers' especially platform workers and workers employed under precarious conditions.
- Strengthening workers' (participation) rights is a key prerequisite in a the road towards more sustainability.
- Participation in and ownership of change is necessary to shape a successful transformation.
- New forms of work due to digitalisation need new forms of participation.
- The European Charter of fundamental Rights and the Pillar of Social Rights are the base when it comes to social progress. However, looking at EU secondary law workers' information, consultation and participation rights need to be uplifted.

If you have further questions, do not hesitate to contact us?

Dr. Norbert Kluge
Hans-Boeckler-Foundation

norbert-kluge@boeckler.de